

TWO MEN SHOT DEAD, ASSAILANTS ESCAPE

Unidentified Man Is Killed in
Bootleg Quarrel in a Saloon.

ONE FEUD VICTIM ALSO
Assassins Pour Bullets Into
Italian Out on Bail for New Jersey Murder.

Two men were shot and killed last night in Manhattan—one an assassination in Avenue A, which is believed to have been the outgrowth of an old Italian feud, and the other in a saloon at Eighth avenue and 122d street in a fight that the police believe was started by a bootlegging quarrel. In both cases the men who did the shooting escaped.

The man who died in the fight in the saloon had not been identified at 2 o'clock this morning. He was about 25 years old and was shot through the head. The police believe he was not taking part in the shooting that caused his death. Two other persons, one a woman of 38, and Thomas Barrett, 36, of 250 West 124th street, were taken from the saloon to Harlem Hospital in a critical condition. Barrett was shot in the stomach and the woman in the right hip and right breast.

Detectives from the West 123d street station, working under Capt. Hubert Callahan, traced most of the facts of the shooting through Otto Koltz of 147 West 115th street, a taxi driver, who said that at Fourteenth street and Eighth avenue two men stopped him at 11 o'clock last night, got into his car and told him to drive to Thirty-sixth street between Ninth and Tenth avenues. They left him and returned in five minutes, telling him to drive to 122d street and Eighth avenue.

Go Into Saloon to Shoot.

Koltz said the two men told him to stop at the southeast corner and to leave his engine running. They got out and went into the saloon on the northeast corner, bought a couple of drinks from the bartender, Harry McDonald of 250 West 121st street, and then walked to the back room, where three couples—among them Barrett and Mrs. Bessie Bradley, 41, of 250 West 112th street—were sitting at their drinks.

Within less than a minute, according to the bartender, the shooting began and six shots were fired rapidly, while the two men who had got out of the taxi cab backed out of the room with revolvers drawn. Fourteen men who were lined up at the bar scattered to make way for them. In the meantime Koltz, the chauffeur, had crossed to a cigar store. The two men ran out of the saloon, jumped into the empty taxi cab and disappeared east in 122d street, with the chauffeur running after them.

In the back room the unidentified man was found lying dead on his face near the entrance to a wash room. It is believed he was in the wash room when the shooting began and ran out just as one of the men fired. The woman and Barrett were lying beside their table. The police were unable to obtain any information from them as to what started the quarrel—whether it was whiskey or women. The bartender said he knew Barrett as a bootlegger.

Struck by a Fusillade.

Frank Puma, 40, a laborer, of 508 East Twelfth street, was standing at Twelfth street and Avenue A last night, his hands thrust in his pockets, when a fusillade of bullets began to rain on him. When it was over Puma had wounds in the chest, the side and the wrist. He died in Bellevue Hospital.

Celia Kullman, aged 7, of 514 East Twelfth street, who was nearby, was wounded in the hip.

Detective Cassetti of the Fifth street station, who questioned Puma at the hospital, said Puma was under $20,000 bail in connection with the murder of an Italian near Asbury Park, N. J., several months ago. His arrest followed a confession made by a man named Fontana, now serving a twenty year sentence for the same offense.

In the hallway near where the shooting occurred detectives found two revolvers. Blood spots there led the police to believe another man was shot.

MANY SHIP TYPES SEEN AT MARINE EXPOSITION

Show Will Be Thrown Open to Public To-morrow.

Delegates and specially invited guests inspected the 150 exhibits of the second annual Marine Exposition of the American Marine Association, which opened last night in the Grand Central Palace. Everything pertaining to ocean-going ships, from driving mechanism to the latest refinement of the stewards' department, is included in the exhibits. In addition to the booths of private manufacturing and shipping firms many branches of the Government service are included.

The most interesting feature is the exhibit of ship models by the U. S. Navy, which shows the progress of American naval architecture from the days of the Bon Homme Richard to the giant Pennsylvania of to-day. Among historic vessels represented are the Vermont, the Constitution, the Monitor, the Merrimack, and several of Admiral Dewey's ships. The Marine Corps, the N. Y. Naval Militia, the U. S. Coast Guard Service and the Department of Commerce also are represented.

HUNDREDS SEE MOTOR THIEVES SHOOT MAN

Bandits in Brooklyn Desert
Car and Get Away.

Hundreds of persons in the Brooklyn shopping district last night on automobile bandit shoot and seriously wound Charles Collins, 35, of 25 Herkimer street, when he tried to prevent the theft of an automobile owned by F. W. Lang, an attorney, of 30 South Oxford street.

Collins, secretary to Mr. Lang, had stopped the car on West 124th street, near Pacific street. He walked to a news stand. Seeing the two men enter the automobile, he ran after it. One bandit shot him in the side as he jumped on the running board.

The automobile was caught in a traffic jam on Franklin avenue and the two men abandoned it, mingled with the crowd and got away.

FALLS DEAD ON GOLF COURSE.

Herbert T. Grantham Succumbs at Philadelphia Country Club.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 4.—Herbert T. Grantham, vice-president of the Belmont Iron Works, to-day fell dead on the golf course of the Philadelphia Country Club as he was about to drive off for the thirteenth hole.

Because of his joviality earlier in the game his companions at first thought he was joking, but soon realized the seriousness of the attack. He died before medical assistance could reach him.
